congress, Secretary Garfield sent a letter to the president and senate with it.

This letter follows:

"Sir: The Pueblo Indians of New Mexico have been the gubject of much consideration by those conversant with Indian affairs. They now hold their lands in common by an indefeasible title. So long as this exists it seems likely that their present communal life, which experience has shown to be detrimental, both to themselves and to the surrounding people, will continue.

"The Pueblo titles are not of record, and as, under the statutes of New Mexico, seven years' occupancy gives title by prescription, a great deal of trouble is constantly arising because of the uncertainty of the little to lands which the Indians own. A resident of a given pueblo will convey to an Indian or a white man, and the latter will go on the land and occupy it for a time and then set up a claim against the community title of the Pueblo. Generally he succeeds in establishing his claim, although it seems likely that in the majority of these cases the claimant does not have the better cause, but his claim is the better prosecuted. I think, if authorized by legislation, that these people could be induced to convey their lands to the United States, and afterwards, if the law is framed to authorize it, the lands could be reconveyed to the individual, Of course this could not be done at once, but in a reasonable time, I think, much progress could be made in breaking up the conditions that now prevail."
